A CARD. The office of Prescriptionist is as properly sepe rated from that of Physician, as the part of the mechanic who puts work together from that of the Architect, who plans it. The art of prescribing and the art of compounding medicines are two different professions, requiring a different training for profi-ciency in either. But the latter is of equal responsibility with the former, demanding as safe qualifi-cations, a thorough Pharmaceutical education and The one formerly occupied by Dr. Charles W. Bean cations, a thorough Pharmaceutical education and long practical experience in the manipulation of drugs. To meet these important requirements, I have employed as my prescriptionist, Mr. Sherman, of Richmond, Va., who to a full course of study in the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy, adds an experience of six or seven years, in one of the first prescription stores of Philadelphia and Richmond. No other assistant in the store but himself will put up prescriptions.
